EXPERIENCE

I am a skilled web developer with expertise in Python and Django, specializing in creating robust and user-friendly web applications.

With a strong background in software development, I have successfully completed several projects, including an online food ordering system developed in Laravel and PHP. My experience also includes developing a student catering system for Addis Ababa University using C# and implementing a student management system in Django.

My passion for technology and innovation drives me to continuously learn and adapt to new challenges in the field. I thrive in dynamic environments where I can leverage my skills to deliver high-quality solutions that meet and exceed client expectations.
